LLOYD GEORGE GIVES ANSWER TO CRITICISM

Irish Question and Russian Problem Among Matters Discussed by Premier

LONDON, Feb. 10.—Replying to general criticisms of the government's policy made by William Adamson, a labor leader, Sir Donald Maclean and others who demanded especially the revision of the Versailles peace treaty, Premier Lloyd George declared in the house of commons this evening that it would be impossible in a single speech to deal with all the questions raised.

Alluding to Ireland the premier asked whether Mr. Adamson meant by "self-determination" that if the majority of the Irish people demanded a republic he would give it. Unless Mr. Adamson meant that, said the premier, his talk of self-determination was dishonest. He asked whether the member thought the government would withdraw all its troops and "leave the assassins in charge in Ireland."

Declaring that the duty of the government was to maintain law and order in Ireland, the premier turned to the high cost of living which he said was attributable to the depreciation of money and not to profiteering. The only resort was to increase production, he declared.

Replying to Sir Donald Maclean's inquiry the premier said he was glad to be able to say that the coming budget would more than balance.

Dealing at length with the situation in Russia, Mr. Lloyd George said he agreed with the view that Europe could not be restored without putting Russia, with all her strength and resources "into circulation."

Bolshevism Not Democracy. Bolshevism was possibly efficient, said the premier, but it was not democracy and Russia must be restored under an anti-Bolshevik regime.

"Bolshevism cannot be crushed by the forces of arms," continued the premier. "I held that opinion a year ago, but my advice, tendered on that assumption to the warring factions, was declined."

The premier intimated that the suggested "ring of fire" to crush the Bolsheviks was impossible because it was doubtful whether England would consent and the Baltic states, he pointed out, were making peace with Russia while Rumania was already engaged in watching the Hungarian front and the Japanese were disinclined toward the idea. Moreover, he added, neither France, the United States, Italy nor Great Britain was willing to provide the funds.

Cannot Make Peace. "Until they are assured that the Bolsheviks have dropped the methods of barbarism in favor of civilized government," added the premier, "no civilized community in the world is prepared to make peace with them. Further there is no established government possessing the right to speak for the whole of European Russia. We failed to restore Europe to sanity by force. I believe we can save her by trade."

"Commerce has a sobering influence. There is nothing to fear from a Bolshevik invasion of surrounding countries or middle east because the Bolsheviks cannot organize a powerful army."

"The dangers are not all in Russia; they are here at home. I speak with knowledge, with apprehension and responsibility, and I warn the house that in the face of things which may happen we must use every legitimate weapon. We must fight anarchy with abundance."

COMMITTEE. 2751

REAR ADMIRAL SIMS DENIES ALLEGED TALK

Rep. Byrnes Must Have Misunderstood Remarks Made in Europe

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Rear Admiral William S. Sims denied today before the senate committee investigating naval awards that in conversations with Representative Barnes, Democrat, South Carolina, and other members of congress he had sought to be little America's efforts in the war.

The admiral said Mr. Byrnes "must either have misunderstood me or confused the remarks made to him by the many people he talked to in Europe." He added that he did attempt to correct the idea in the minds of American visitors that the United States forces were "winning the war because this attitude was hurting us with our allies."

"They knew it was not true and they knew we knew it was not true," Admiral Sims declared. "I am surprised that I should be quoted as saying the merchant marine should be left to Great Britain and the United States should not develop a merchant marine," he continued, "because I never held any opinion on that subject."

Senator Pittman, Democrat, Nevada, declared that Admiral Sims had left the same impression in the minds of former Secretary of the Treasury Glass and Representative Whaley, Democrat, South Carolina, in conversations with them abroad, and asked that they be called to testify before the sub-committee.

"I consider these charges very serious," said Senator Pittman, "and think Admiral Sims should be given an opportunity to clear himself."

PRESIDENT GOMPERS TALKS TO UNION MEN

Asks Unions Aid in Electing Members of Congress Favorable to Organized Labor

WASHINGTON, Feb. 10.—Opening the political campaign of the American Federation of Labor, President Gompers in an address today before the shipbuilding trades' convention here, asked the aid of the unions represented in electing members of congress and other officials favorable to organized labor. He promises every assistance of the organization in obtaining for the United States the greatest merchant marine of the world, through continuance of the wartime construction program.

Mr. Gompers said the failure of the congresses to carry the ship program to a logical conclusion was typical of the attitude of congress toward that body so far as all constructive legislation was concerned.

Talking themselves hoarse. "With the war over, he said, members of congress 'are talking' themselves hoarse in the attempt to further invade the rights of the people of the United States."

"It is a policy just reverse of that in every other country," the speaker asserted, describing the liberal movement in Europe. "It is your duty to see that this tendency toward autocracy is curbed in our fight you can expect the bitterest opposition from every enemy of labor—especially from every standpatter, reactionary and some damn fools on the 'hill.'"

Labor Not Committed to Any Party. Mr. Gompers assured the delegates that the federation's campaign would be conducted on the same lines as heretofore and that the labor vote would not be committed to any party, but would be used exclusively "to reward our friends and to defeat our enemies."

J. A. O'Connell, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, declared the present congress was "the most reactionary in the history of this country" and that from it labor need not hope for the slightest remedial legislation. He referred to anti-strike legislation as a deliberate attempt to enslave labor through compelling workmen to remain on the job against their wills.

Must "Clean House." "We must prepare to clean house," the speaker said. "Labor is entitled at the very least to an even break in representation in congress."

Announcement of the federation's decision to wage an active campaign, he said, already has led congressmen to anxiously review their records, but he warned these that labor would do its own reviewing.

RAILWAY STRIKE TO BE EFFECT FEB. 17

No Court Injunction Can Prevent Walkout—Strike Will Occur unless Demands Met

DETROIT, Mich., Feb. 10.—The strike of 300,000 members of the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees and railway shop laborers will go into effect February 17, as ordered regardless of any steps the government may take, short of meeting the demands of the men for wage increases, President Barker of the brotherhood reiterated today.

"No court injunction can prevent the strike," Mr. Barker declared. "The strike order is out and the strike will take place unless Director General Hines meets our wage demands."

Replying today to a statement attributed to Mr. Hines that the strike call issued yesterday was in violation of the railroad wage agreement, Mr. Barker said:

"We have a thirty days' notice clause in our wage agreement. Notice, however, was served upon the railroad administration last July. It was renewed on December 30, both by letter and by personal conferences with the director general after we had held the strike in abeyance pending efforts of President Wilson to reduce the cost of living."

When told that press dispatches reported that a strike of railway trainmen was threatened and that indications were the entire situation would be laid before President Wilson, Mr. Barker said events were proceeding about as he had anticipated.

The Greatest Attraction Ever Offered at The Alhambra Theatre

Starts Next Sunday Evening MARY PICKFORD IN "POLLY ANNA"

We know, so we tell you without fear of contradiction, that "Pollyanna" is the greatest production that has ever been produced by Mary Pickford. Primarily, allow us to remind you that this picture is taken from one of the greatest books that was ever written, which story has been read and loved by millions of people in the country. Its popularity as a "best seller" is unprecedented, and upon the occasion of the story having been made into a stage production, its popularity was second to none.

The history of the motion picture would have been quite different had it not been for the ineffable charm of Mary Pickford, who has always been an inspired artist, without rival. There never has been, nor will there ever be, anyone to challenge the high place she holds in the minds of the amusement-loving people, for she has had the unusual distinction of maintaining first place for many years in the rank of that most fickle of all things, popularity. She has won her place by sheer merit.

THIS IS HER FIRST INDEPENDENTLY PRODUCED PICTURE FOR UNITED ARTISTS. Miss Pickford, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, and David W. Griffith were compelled to throw off the shackles that bound them to the antiquated traditions of old, the program system and the star series system, so as to enable them to produce independently, and have all of their productions marketed singly and solely on a basis of merit. That decision of these artists has brought the new and hitherto undreamed-of heights in production, the kind the "Big Four" are presenting, and the kind that Miss Pickford has never had the opportunity of producing before, the kind like "Pollyanna."

IT GOES WITHOUT SAYING THAT MARY PICKFORD IS THE BIG FEATURE OF THIS PRODUCTION. Miss Pickford alone will bring into your theater all of your motion picture patrons, but this production will do more for you than any you have ever had the privilege of presenting. Because this production is the story of "the glad girl," the story that has brought more love into the hearts of more people than any single story that has ever been written by an American; a story whose theme has been used as the subject of a thousand sermons in a thousand pulpits; a story whose theme has become the religion of a whole people, the religion of being glad and happy; a story that has caused the greatest writers to use its theme as the basis of their best discussions and has impelled big business men throughout the country to bring about a greater feeling of brotherly love in their organizations.

From Eleanor H. Porter's Novel, "Pollyanna." Published by the Page Company. Screen Adaptation by Frances Marion. Photographed by Charles Rosher. Directed by Paul Powell.

The story of a little girl who, by making it her religion to be as glad as possible, gradually brought home to those around her the fact that the spirit of gladness is the best philosophy in the world. Pollyanna, who's first ten years of life were spent in a rude home in the Ozark Mountains where her parents had come in search of health. Her mother did not live long, however, and Pollyanna was raised by her semi-invalid father, whose resources were very limited, but whose love for her was boundless. From the child absorbed the characteristics of "gladness," and learned to temper the hardships and sorrows of life with what they called "The Glad Game."

When Pollyanna was ten years of age, Mr. Whitler followed his wife to the Great Beyond, and the little orphan then went to live with her mother's sister, Polly Harrington, in the New England village of Beldingville.

New Aunt Polly was a very determined sort of person who had never married—the "twins" said she had nearly married Dr. Chilton years before. However, she had pulled her hair back severely, set her mouth in an uncompromising line, made herself a power in the local Ladies' Aid, and preached long and positively, her detestation of filth and muddy feet.

Pollyanna was unfortunate enough to reach her new home in a dreary rainstorm, and when Nancy, the housemaid, ushered her into Aunt Polly's presence, the heart-broken, lonely, little girl threw herself—streaming clothes, muddy shoes and all—on the silk bosom of Aunt Polly.

Consequently, Pollyanna's impression on her relative was not of the best, and from then on, strive as she would to please every effort seemed to bear the wrong sort of fruit. She tried to persuade the Ladies' Aid to adopt a stray orphan who whom she had discovered, but they firmly believed more credit would be theirs if they continued to fill missionary barrels with useful and useless articles—so Jimmie Bean, the orphan, for the time being was left almost homeless. Almost—because Pollyanna sneaked him into the back-parlor to sleep on a pile of old sacks.

In her overtures to Nancy, Old Tom, the gardener, and to all the villagers Pollyanna was infinitely more successful than with her austere Aunt. She taught them to play "The Glad Game," and they all loved her for it.

Even crabbed old Mr. Pendleton, the town's rich man, opened his heart to Pollyanna when he recognized her as the daughter of the woman he had loved in his youth.

The climax of the child's efforts to reach Aunt Polly's heart came the night of Aunt Polly's birthday. Aunt Polly spent the day in one of her annual trips to the nearby town, and Pollyanna prepared to receive her with a surprise party, attended by the entire population of Beldingville—little and big, black and white.

Upon her arrival, Aunt Polly although properly surprised, failed to appreciate the honor done her, and proceeded to chase everyone out of the house.

As climax to all this wild excitement Pollyanna received a good sound spanking from Aunt Polly.

Often it seems a catastrophe is required to bring about the greatest good. So it was for little Pollyanna. She tried to save a child from the wheels of Pendleton's auto, only to be run down herself. Although she escaped with her life, the lower portion of her body became paralyzed, and as a result of this misfortune it seemed she would never be able to walk again.

Aunt Polly, her even fully owned by this catastrophe, was now very sorry for the way she had treated her little niece. Aunt Polly was kinder to her, for the full meaning of the "Glad Game" had been brought home to her with compelling force.

Although the specialist, Aunt Polly had held out no hope for the child, Pollyanna insisted that Dr. Chilton could help her. Finally Aunt Polly's awakened love for her little niece overcame her pride, and she allowed the physician who years before had been her sweetheart to attend Pollyanna.

And Pollyanna's faith was justified. One day in spring, after months of treatment, the villagers crowded around the gate while inside Aunt Polly, from Dr. Chilton, Mr. Pendleton and Jimmie, (who by the way had been adopted by the Pendletons as a surprise for Pollyanna) anxiously watched Pollyanna's first attempt to walk with the aid of crutches. Her muscles were weak and trembling, but her confidence was supreme and she managed to go the length of the room before falling into Aunt Polly's arms. This proved to the satisfaction of all that Pollyanna would walk again.

The spirit of gladness came back to the household of Aunt Polly, and as time went on and Pollyanna became stronger, the romance and Dr. Chilton again burst into flame. In the end they decided to marry. And Pollyanna and Jimmie picked up their happy childhood again determined to play the "Glad Game" for the rest of their lives—together.

In all your troubles you can always find something to be glad about, says
